Emotional Intelligence for Leaders: Build Stronger Relationships with Team Members

No matter how smart you are, your brain still seems to get the best of you when you are under pressure, worried about change, or just too busy. Your brain has a mind of its own. Yet you can outsmart your brain and make more powerful choices if you know what emotional triggers drive your behavior. You can ease your tension, adapt to changing scenarios, and create better alignment in your conversations with a foundational skills and knowledge in emotional intelligence. This program will help you understand and sometimes laugh at how your brain works so you can consciously choose how to best use your time, your mind, and your skills in unpredictable situations. You can become the master, not the victim of your brain.

Marcia Reynolds, PsyD, CSP

Dr. Marcia Reynolds, CSP is fascinated by the brain, especially what triggers feelings of connection, commitment, and possibility. She draws on her research to teach and coach leaders to get positive results from difficult situations. She has presented in 35 countries for corporations, government agencies, associations, and universities including Harvard Kennedy School, Cornell University, and schools in Canada, Russia, and Kazakhstan. Marcia's doctoral degree is in organizational psychology. She continues to research workplace behaviors, leadership effectiveness, and the science of motivation and engagement. She also holds two master's degrees in education and communications.
